

I value music very much. As an artist, it is what partially gives me inspiration. Since radio has gone downhill in terms of QUALITY of music, not CONTENT, I retreat to online radio stations, but sadly enough it is becoming increasingly censored. If I turn to an online music station to hear the music that will not be played on AM/FM radio is censored... where else am I to turn for quality music. If I wish to hear the WHOLE UNDAULTERED version of a song, I wish to get it. I have also heard that the stations that do NOT censor their content are subscription based television cable networks and radio. Does this mean that I have to pay to hear profanities? Are you privatizing music more so than it already is? How much can you censor before people start getting frustrated and annoyed with your "public service"? Stop the absurdities. It is getting ridiculous. Who are you protecting? Parents who are poor at parenting? How can I know that the taxes I pay go to a service that PREVENTS me from hearing whole music. One might say that the FCC is similar to the tattletale in kindergarten that tells on other kids just to get a kick out of it. Is the FCC a public service or public nuisance?
